

Charles Gorman,

Counselor. He has taught at Southern State since 1998 as a professor in the Human and Social Services program, which he has considered his dream job.

Carl Rogers, an American Psychologist and shining example to Charlie, believed all people need acceptance, unconditional love, and positive regard to thrive in this world. Similar to Rogers beliefs, Charlie's mantra to life is quite simple - "All people will bloom like flowers when nurtured in a fertile garden. Love covers a multitude of problems."
